

Global Trust Certification

Global Trust is an accredited certification body with operational projects in over 15 countries spanning the globe. The company has its global headquarters in Ireland and is owned by its management and staff.

The company was founded in 1998 by the current CEO, Mr Peter Marshall, to service the needs of industry and to bridge confidence through certification. Global Trust attained its accreditation for its certification activities in 2001. Global Trust certificates are recognised in over forty countries.

The Global Trust mission is to “Add value by delivering Confidence and to Protect Consumers, our Clients and the Environment”. Global Trust leads the world in the new areas of Eco-Label, Sustainability and Trust initiatives.

Global Trust has had many years experience in accredited certification in the Seafood Sector, our dynamic management team and staff members have had decades of supply chain experience from net to knife. Global Trust’s staff are active members at every level in the International Association of Fish Inspectors (IAFI).

The Global Trust senior team members are market, business and product focused. They are well recognised as practical and expert in their appointed sectors and have been drawn from Global Seafood, Retail, Manufacturing, Agri-Food and Environmental Sectors.

Global Trust clients include both Multinationals and SME's, National and Regional Government Bodies, National and International Producer Groups, Marketing Organisations, Retail and Consumer Groups.

Through the Global Trust’s global operations they have a global network of experts that act at a local level. The company offers certification to all the leading Global Seafood Standards and some tailor made initiatives.

More information is available about Global Trust Certification from their Website www.GTCERT.com or via email request at info@GTCERT.com.